

Seasonal Display Containers

Spring 2013

All containers listed have a label indicating its number and location. By matching the location and number of plants growing in each container. There are four types of plants that are typically used in a container design. Some of our containers may incorporate all four types, while others may use only a few.

The four plant types are:

- 1) Background Plants: These plants are usually the tallest, placed in the back of the container
- 2) Center Plants: These plants are also quite tall, used as an anchor plant in the center of the
- 3) Mid-Height Plants: These intermediate sized plants are typically used in front of the Background Plants used by themselves or with Trailing Plants incorporated into the design, if so desired.

Trailer Plants: These plants cascade over the edge of the container, resulting in a trailing effect. These plants are often used in combination with any or all of the plant types mentioned above.
